

General Meal Comments

Food was very good overall. The only issues were quantities on some things and usually it was an over issue.

We did really well on most recipes. I think there was only one trip to town for additional items and it was for a new recipe.

We continue to let ourselves down by not having good recipes and instructions. We were slightly better this year but there is still considerable room for improvement. Maybe each meal should have an instruction packet with recipes for each dish along with some cooking tips.

Unique Meal

The amount of Linguine seemed way too high. This might have been because we used egg noodles instead of linguine, but we need to check the recipe either way before we use it again. When we moved to a by table approach we lost some of our intention of it being a "get to know you thing". Maybe if we did this gain, you should try to pick something that will be shared only by you and one other person.

Bakery Snack

We did a great job on the bread, but were a little lax in preparing other items we could have made then like cookies for lunch the following day.

Rat on a Stick

The food was good and the meal seemed popular, but it was much too complex for a lunch. Maybe if we did it again we could do it as a dinner and organize it as a "make your own", with campers skewering their own assortment of items. We also need to have more pineapple.

Apres-Cardio

We need to double the diced tomatoes and halve the rice (maybe three-quarters the rice). The meal seems like a worthy addition to camp.

Raw Deal Meal

I think it worked better than anyone could have expected.

Black Knight Meal

I never like bone-in chicken.

General Activity Comments

We did a great job of adhering to the scheduled activities with only minor exceptions.

I think the papier mache activity was doomed by scheduling and that meant the follow-up Burn the Witch was also doomed. We need to have things on the schedule and not to expect concurrent activities to succeed.

Uncle Ethan's Craft Hour

This was a huge success. Great choice of project!

Table Top Games

I don't think this was as well executed as in previous years. Primary issue was Steve not bringing games. I think people have gotten used to having a box of games (I was asked about them at least 3 times).

Not Being Seen

We probably needed to engage those who knew more about this. I thought all stump remover was the same. Turns out not to be true.

Other Comments

We didn't make much on the trading post. Our total was about 135. Our outlay for trading post pop & candy was about 115, so $20. This was hurt a little by the arrival of free pop & candy, but overall we were hurt more by people bringing their own which seems to be growing over time.

The ride situation is problematic. On the one hand, we don't do a great job of supporting it since so many adults are already in camp – at the same time, they aren't coming from the area of the chapter, so coming to Bollman's is a problem (many of their vehicles are also full, another issue). We could probably fix some of this by meeting somewhere else in recognition of the existence of cell phones which might make location more central. I'm not sure abandoning rideshare is the right answer since Dec 27 is a workday for many parents and so finding rides is important. Maybe an answer will suggest itself in the next 11 months (of course, it's many years so far). Things we could do: improve registration to make sure we get ride information, create a rideboard on facebook or some other tool to help kids find a way to camp, rent a bus.

We should probably call out some of our inherent free time on the schedule. We have an event at 1 that we expect to last until 230 and we call out the next activity at 3 but not the 30 minutes of time between. Possibly we should have an hour long activity at 4 each day so cooks could skip it and be in the kitchen with 2 hours to cook dinner. Most dinners should be completed in 2 hours.

Adults should probably be on the duty roster. I know there were adults who did more and less than me in the kitchen. Most of the mores probably don't mind, but that doesn't make it fair.

It's time to get rid of the fees that is "Meet at Bollinger" on Dec. 27. The new policy should be "Winter Camp starts at 10:30 AM on Dec. 27. Get to D-A by then. For help finding a ride, contact the youth leader or WC advisor."
Sincerely, Jim done with this.

Evaluation

What were your favorite activities from Winter Camp?

The activities were entertaining, it was nice to see even the adults participate and be just as enthusiastic. It was nice to see most everyone participate in almost all of the events.

What changes could we make to activities to improve them next time?

If you have a theme, then that theme should be evident in more than just the names of the activities.

What are activities you would like to try next year?

Some activities are kept for tradition, but you should always be evolving the activities adding new things as the years go by to keep that cutting edge on winter camp.

What were your favorite meals from Winter Camp?

The meals were amazing. It was nice to see food made from scratch by boys who probably don't ever do this outside cooking merit badge. ~~You should get the boys who want to, in their a little better.~~

What changes could we make to meals to improve them next time?

The boys that sign up to cook should be able to have the time and ability to help without them missing out on activities. would also add in some scheduled down time prior to meals.

What are some meals you would like to try next year?

It was nice to have a meal that tied into the theme. It would be nice to tie in your meals and pre meal events into the theme.

What are some other changes that we could make next time to improve Winter Camp?

Well your winter camp is steeped in tradition. It tends to take over in most events, leading to a loss of why we do some things. Tradition should be kept, but does not need to be pushed into everything. Tradition and history lessons should be given when doing things that are done out of tradition, the perimeter hike, the pre walk to the ceremony, etc.

Other Comments

The ceremony was a very nice time capsul one. How ever for an event taking place on the last night of the camp, more work could have been done on things such as lines and look. It is not an overall bad thing to read lines but you should know the wordings enough to not mispronounce to were others must correct you. Well the ceremony is done once a year it would be nice for it to be polished like the other ceremonies.
